NUMBER 4.

The Opening Gun in Local Option Fight.

The filing of petitions Saturday afternoon by both the local option and the saloon men, was the first gun to be fired in the campaign, which no doubt will be one of the warm kind.

The advocates of local option, through a delegation composed of J. S. Wilson, J. T. Martin, George W. Clarke, George W. Wilder and Wm. Myall, the latter gentleman being spokesman, filed a petition in the County Court asking that an election for and within the City of Paris be called for April 11th. The petition is styled George W. Clarke and others, and contains the names of 344 citizens, who declare they are qualified voters in the city. It reads as follows:

"We the undersigned legal voters of and in the City of Paris, in Bourbon county, Kentucky, being a number in excess of twenty-five per cent. of the votes cast in said city at the last general election, and at the last city election in said city, respectfully petition the County Court of Bourbon County to order a poll to be opened in each of the precincts in said City of Paris, Kentucky, on the 11th day of April, 1907, to take the sense of the legal voters of said city on the proposition whether spirituous, vinous, malt or other intoxicating liquors shall be sold, bartered or loaned in said city of Paris, Kentucky, and that this law and provision shall apply to druggists also. We further petition for such ord'rs and proceedings upon the subject of special registration as may be necessary and proper."

The Court will pass upon this petition on Court Day, March 4th.

After the above petition was filed the saloon men, through their attorney, Mr. J. J. Williams, filed a similar petition. The only difference in the two petitions is that the latter does not apply to druggists or ask for a special registration. This petition is signed by 313 legal voters.

There are petitions ready, so we are informed, to be filed by both sides, and the public is anxiously awaiting developments when the preliminary skirmishing is over.

Biggest Tobacco Deal on Record

The largest deal in dark tobacco within the last twenty-five years and the second largest deal ever made in the history of the product, has just been consummated in Louisville. The purchase involves 10,000,000 pounds, which means between 6,000 and 7,000 hogsheads of the weed, and the amount of money involved is not less than $750,000. The purchase was made from the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company by Nat F. Dorch, for Mathews & Sons, whose headquarters are in Louisville, and who sold out some years ago to what is now the American Tobacco Company.

Held to Circuit Court.

Mrs. Nancy Shropshire, who was arrested Thursday in this city on the charge of attempting to extort $500 each from G. R. Burberry and Jerry Sullivan, of Centerville, this county, by means of threatening letters, was held to the grand jury Friday in the sum of $2,000. As Judge Denis Dundon is a brother-in-law of Sullivan, he vacated the bench, and Justice Fletcher Mann conducted the trial. The bonds required were for the peace warrants and were signed by several of her relatives from Georgetown.

STOCK, CROP, ETC.

Geo. W. Wilder sold 25,000 pounds of tobacco Saturday to the American Tobacco Co. at 11 cents straight.

Mrs. J. H. Maston sold her farm on Cane Ridge, containing 50 acres to Jack Harrington, for $85 per acre.

Dan Hurst, of near Millersburg, sold his farm of 190 acres, Wednesday, to Silas Cleaver for $105 per acre.

Norman Hudson, of Headquarters, sold his 42 acre farm Friday to E. C. Graffin for $65 per acre.

J. C. Ellis, representing the American Company, bought ten crops of tobacco from Bourbon county farmers, last week, aggregating 125,000 pounds at from 5 to 12 cents.

W. B. Woodford sold to W. C. Greene, of Mt. Sterling, 40 head of cattle, average about 1,400 pounds, at $6 to $14.50 per hundred.

George Ellis sold in Cincinnati last week 23 hogsheads of tobacco at from $6 to $14.50 per hundred.

Kentucky-Jamestown Notes.

Returns are expected from all counties by Feb. 15, showing the exact amount that has been subscribed to the $40,000 fund sought by the Kentucky Jamestown Exposition Commission. It will be just seventy days from that date before the opening of the Exposition on April 26, and the Commission has announced that it must hear from each county by the middle of the month. Much interest has been taken in the canvass which started under the name of "Kentucky-Jamestown week" and it is believed that a sufficient fund has been subscribed to erect a State Building and make a handsome display of Kentucky's products and resources.

Ballard county was the first to turn into the State Commission its entire pro rata of $157.93. Chas. Wickliffe is vice-chairman of the Division of Finance for Ballard county. The Fiscal Court of the county raised the entire portion.

Clark county has exceeded the quota of $509.87 asked as its subscription for the State fund. B. R. Jouett, of Winchester, is county chairman and the sum which was collected by popular subscription was turned over to the Commission through Judge J. M. Benton, a member of the Board. There were over 100 subscribers to the fund in Clark county.

Mercer and Montgomery counties are among those which have announced the raising of their entire quotas. W. W. Stephenson is chairman of the Mercer county committee and H. Clay McKee is in charge of the canvass in Montgomery county.

Dr. Landman.

Dr. Landman, the oculist, will be at the Windsor Hotel, on Tuesday, Feb. 12th. 5-8

Bourbon News Customers Get the Benefit.

The Chatfield & Woods Co., of Cincinnati, one of the largest paper houses in the country, have sent out to their customers the following notice:

"Owing to the general advance in almost all grades of paper, we are compelled to withdraw all prices and will take pleasure in naming new prices on application."

Several weeks since the Bourbon News foresaw this advance in paper stock and placed orders for sufficient stock at the prices then prevailing to last us for six months. Our customers get the benefit of this. Besides giving you lower prices, we also take pleasure in again reminding you of the fact that "The Bourbon News does the best printing."

Floral Valentines.

Place your orders early for Floral Valentines with Bruce Holladay, agent for Honaker. 5-8

Young Men Meet at the Capitol City.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Kentucky will hold two conventions this year, in place of the State convention hitherto held annually, but now meeting biennially. The Central and Eastern Kentucky Convention will meet at Frankfort, February 22-24, and the Western Kentucky convention on April 12-14, at Madisonville, in connection with the opening of the new $22,000 Association building at that place.

E. F. Spears & Sons' Red Cross Flour has no equal. Try a sack and be convinced. 8-8

Notice, Farmers!

The members of the Bourbon county Farmers Club are hereby notified to meet at the court house Friday, February 15th, at 2 o'clock p. m., to send delegates to the annual State Farmers' Institute, which meets at Shelbyville, Feb. 26, 27 and 28.

THOS. HENRY CLAY, President. A. THOMPSON, Secretary.

Coroner Investigates Cause of Death of J. D. Anderson.

Coroner Dr. Wm. Kenney summoned a jury to the court house Friday morning and made a thorough investigation into the cause of the death of Cat Inspector J. D. Anderson, who was killed Wednesday in the local yards of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad while engaged in the performance of his duties, resulting in the following verdict.

"We the jury find that J. D. Anderson, in the employ of the Louisville & Nashville & Nashville Railroad Company in the capacity of car inspector, came to his death on the morning of February 6, 1907, while in the discharge of his duties for said Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company, by being run over while coupling air hose. We also find that the accident was caused by freight train No. 93 backing out, and that the crew of said freight No. 93, used all reasonable precaution to avoid said accident, and fix no blame on the employees." Signed. GEORGE RASSENFOSS, Foreman.

Chickens and Eggs Wanted.

We want your chickens, butter and eggs. 11-2t C. P. COOK & CO.

A Call Meeting.

The members of the Democratic County Committee are requested to meet at the court house in Paris, Ky., on Saturday, February 16th, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of setting a time and manner of nominating candidates for the offices of County Clerk and member of the Legislature.

J. H. THOMSPON, Chairman County Committee.

Thaw's Mother Promised to Help Kentucky School.

The trouble of Harry K. Thaw, now on trial in New York for murder is being felt very keenly in Maysville at present. Some time last year his mother became interested in some manner in the Presbyterian school and college at Pikeville, Ky., which is doing great good in that section of the State in the educating of the young people and preparing young men for the ministry, especially for work in the mountains of Eastern Kentucky.

Mrs. Thaw promised to give the sum of $1,500 when needed. There was no note taken from her, nothing save a memorandum made of the promise. Last week Rev. Dr. John Barbour, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Maysville, who is the chairman of the committee that collects donations, received a letter from the superintendent, stating the school was badly in need of funds at present. Dr. Barbour has Mrs. Thaw's promise, but owing to the trouble of her son at present he did not think it wise to remind her of her promise, but raised the necessary funds in his own congregation. This school at Pikeville is under the direct management of Ebenezer Presbytery, North, and is one of the best institutions of its kind in the State.

Thanks Awfully, Dan.

The Woodford Sun says: "The Bourbon News was twenty-seven years old last Friday. The News gets better every year. Its editor, Swift Champ, is one of the most capable and popular newspaper men in the State."

Beautiful Home Burns.

Lyndhurst, the country home of John Wanamaker, at Chelton Hills, near Jenkinsburg, was destroyed by fire Friday night. The loss is estimated at $750,000. Mr. Wanamaker's home was considered one of the most artistic and valuable of Philadelphia suburban properties. The estate consists of thirty acres, and the house stood on a hill about 350 yards from the Old York road. The art gallery contained some rare prints and valuable paintings.

The fire made rapid progress, but a few valuable paintings were saved, among them "Christ Before Pilate" and "Christ on Calvary," by Munkacsy. The paintings are valued at $25,000.

THOS. HENRY CLAY, President. A. THOMPSON, Secretary.

COME TO THE Texas Panhandle!

Hundreds and Thousands of Men are Making Fortunes in the opening and Development of this Wonderful, Rich New Country.

Don't you want some of this money? You can share in it if you will. We run a big excursion to Stratford, County Seat of Sherman County, Texas, the first and third Tuesdays of every month. Next one goes Tuesday, January 15. You can for a small expense, go along and see this great Panhandle for yourself. We will show you splendid money-making opportunities for either investment or a home. The money is there for you to make. The railroads give you a low rate. We do all we can to help you get it. But it all depends on whether you go to see it or not. So it is "up to you." If you go we will offer you the best money-making opportunities you ever saw.

The soil is deep and rich. The surface is level and unbroken. Settlers who go there now will be wealthy men in a few years. You will see crops that will amaze you. You can get absolutely reliable information from the farmers and others who live there. The climate is ideal, winter and summer. Free from malaria, rheumatism, bronchial, catarrhal and lung troubles.

This land is bound to double in price in a very short time. It makes from 75 to 100 per cent. profit on present prices, either in small grain or stock-raising. If you want to share in the big profits being made in the opening and development of this grand new country, go NOW. Make up your mind to-day that you will go next week and see it for yourself.

Call on or see Paris Manager for BRANIGAR LAND, CO., Stratford, Texas.

Retaliative Tariff.

The Protective Tariff League has lately resolved that it is quite ready to endorse the suggestion of Secretary Taft for a maximum and minimum tariff, "provided; that the minimum tariff on foreign products shall at all times fully represent the difference in cost of production and that the maximum tariff shall be levied upon the products of all nations which discriminate against the exports of the United States." That, of course, means that the present rates are to be the maximum rates for the products of those countries "which discriminate against the exports of the United States. These resolutions of the League are evidently intended to be a threat to the Republican tariff revisionists and also to Germany and other countries that have maximum rates established. For it will be remembered that when the German government enacted its new tariff Congressman McCleary, of Minnesota, who has been the faithful spokesman of the League and the standpatters, immediately introduced his bill providing for a twenty-five per cent. increase of the present tariff rates as the maximum rates to be paid on products of countries discriminating against American goods. That was in February 1906, and Congressman McCleary boasted that his threat had the effect of forcing the German government to postpone putting its maximum rates into immediate effect. In fact, Secretary Root arranged with the German government to give this country the advantage of the new minimum rates until July 1, 1907, with the promise that Congress would be asked to modify the tariff rates on German goods, or at least allow them to be imported at the invoice prices and without appraising them as of greater value than the import invoices showed.

Instead of President Roosevelt recommending the present Congress to make these concessions to Germany, he sent a tariff commission to Berlin to investigate and report the precise concessions that must be made by both countries to effect a treaty or understanding. The report of such commission is soon expected to be made, and it is quite possible that the President may call a special session of the Sixtieth Congress to consider the report and enact such tariff legislation as may be necessary. This is why the League has taken the bull by the horns and declared for the only tariff revision it may stand for, namely to revise the tariff higher. The partisans of the League and other Republican standpatters appear to have us in their clutches, for they have a majority of the next House of Representatives and even if enough Republicans bolted and voted with the Democrats to force the new committee on Ways and Means to report a reasonable tariff revision bill, the Senate, with its Trust majority will not consent to such reasonable revision as will satisfy the German government. On the other hand, unless some concessions are made to Germany there will be a great loss to our farmers and exporters of the market for their products on account of the German prohibitive maximum tariff rates that will go into effect on July 1 next.

The Protective Tariff League and the Republican standpatters, have got us into this mess and it is for them to protect us.

The International Marriage. A British peer recently married the daughter of an American millionaire, having settled upon himself an income of $100,000 a year by the father of his wife. He conferred upon the American girl his title and the right to wear the family jewels. A few years have passed and the couple have signed articles of separation, divorce proceedings having been avoided, it is said by intercession of King Edward. The British peer retains his income of 100,000 American dollars, and the wife retains the title she bought and the right to wear the family jewels. This is a sample of "international commerce" that does not command itself to those old-fashioned people who believe that marriage should be the result of love, not of barter and sale.

More Trouble.

Trouble still pursues the Standard Oil saint like a Nemesis. No sooner does he read that some thousands of indictments have been found against him for criminal practices than the customs officers hold up seventy-five-dollar bills and compel the payment of a heavy duty. Verily, the Lord does not seem always to temper the wind to the shorn lamb.

By the way, instead of raising the price of oil because the price of barrels has gone up, why can't John Doe find something cheaper to pack his money away in?

Tariff Reform Demanded.

Gov. Guild, of Massachusetts, has prepared an address to the President and Congress, urging immediate revision of the tariff. And yet the standpatters would have us believe there is no tariff revision sentiment of any consequence in Massachusetts outside the Democratic party. As this Republican governor has invited the legislature and citizens of all parties to sign such an address, he would hardly have done so unless he was certain that his invitation would be generally accepted and would meet the views of a majority of the people. It may be politically necessary for Gov. Guild to show his belief that tariff reform is a necessity for Massachusetts, for there is not much doubt that as an issue it will be paramount at the election of governor next fall.

The Limit of Life.

The most eminent medical scientists are unanimous in the conclusion that the generally accepted limitation of human life is many years below the attainment possible with the advanced knowledge of which the race is now possessed. The critical period, that determines its duration, seems to be between 50 and 60; the proper care of the body during this decade cannot be too strongly urged; carelessness then being fatal to longevity. Nature's best helper after 50 is Electric Bitters, the scientific tonic medicine that revitalizes every organ of the body. Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. 50 cents.

"Everybody Should Know"

Says C. G. Hays, a prominent business man of Bluff, Mo., that Bucklin's Arnica Salve is the quickest and surest healing salve ever applied to a sore, burn or wound, or to a case of piles. I've used it and know what I'm talking about." Guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist, 25 cents.

A Policeman's Strategy.

When Captain W. E. Weber was a patrolman a clothing store upon his beat was robbed one night. The thief had taken off his own old clothes and left them in the store. He had put on a new suit and worn it away. The old suit was that of a boy about fifteen years old.

Weber gathered up the clothes and took them to the old fire patrol house at Seventh avenue and Wyandotte street. He put them upon the floor and, turning the hose on them, drenched them with water. Then he went down to the junction, where at that time the newsboys congregated in great numbers. He gathered a dozen of them around him.

"Boys," he said, "the police found some clothes down on the river bank this morning. It looks like a boy had been drowned. I want all of you to come up to the fire station and look at the clothes. Maybe you can tell me who they belonged to."

No sooner had the "newsies" gathered around the pile of water-soaked clothes than one little fellow spoke up:

"Them's Nifty Smith's. I seen him wearin' them red galluses, an' he sewed that patch on the knee there himself."

Other boys corroborated this story. In less than an hour the officer had corralled Nifty and made him confess to the robbery.—Kansas City Star.

Poisoned With Food.

If one were to say that thousands of people regularly and almost systematically poison themselves with food, it would strike the average layman as extravagant. The opinion of the layman, however, cuts no figure when compared with the scientific deductions of one who has carefully observed the facts. How many people are there who select their food with care, eat it at the right time and in the proper way to secure good digestion and subsequent absorption of just the physiologically correct amount of nutrient required to repair the waste incurred by the duties of everyday life? There are very few. Some starve themselves, but the great majority go to the other extreme and constantly overeat. One eats too much at regular mealtimes, while another eats less, but feeds more frequently. In either case the digestive apparatus is overtaxed.—A Physician in New York World.

A Robust Ghost.

John Leech and a member of the Millais family once stayed a night at Cowdray hall, in England, where, many guests being present, the two friends had no alternative but to accept rooms in an isolated wing supposed to be haunted. In the middle of the night Millais awoke, believing that some giant was shaking him violently by the shoulder. This was supposed to be the favorite device of the ghost. He rushed into a corridor and found Leech sitting there trembling and declaring that he would not for the world go back to his room. They spent the remainder of the night in the corridor, but in the morning said nothing of their experiences. In the afternoon there arrived an evening paper telling of a violent earthquake in the locality. The earthquake was what the two visitors believed to be their ghost.

Valuable Pebbles.

Between the northern point of Long Island and Watch Hill lies a row of little islands, two of which, Plum Island and Goose Island, possess a peculiar form of mineral wealth. It consists in heaps of richly colored quartz pebbles, showing red, yellow, purple and other hues, which are locally called agates. They are used in making stained glass windows, and there is a sufficient demand for them in New York to keep the owners of one or two sloops employed in gathering them from the beaches, where the waves continually roll and polish them, bringing out the beauty of their colors.

A Mountain Joan

By Alicia Carr

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastman

Tilda Dale came up into the mountains of Kentucky from Virginia while the clans of the Doanes and the Hackets were at peace. Not a man on either side had been killed or wounded for five long years. They passed each other on the highway, they met each other in the village, and they sat almost side by side in the log church on a Sunday. They did this with knives in their belts and rifles at hand. At any moment there might be bloodshed. The girl was not a stranger to feuds, but she was not a hater. She had the sentiment of one born amid peaceful surroundings. She had a gentleness about her that awed the grim mountaineers who had sent for her to teach the school at Chestnut Cove. The Doanes and the Hackets were agreed on that. They had met at the schoolhouse, half a dozen on each side, each man with his Winchester across his arm, and talked it over. When they rode slowly away in different directions they had looked back at each other, but not a shout of defiance had been uttered or a shot fired. Schooling was a part of patriotism.

In a week the schoolmistress had heard the story of the feud, but she had refused to become a partisan. When a month had gone past and she was indulging in the hope that she might be the humble instrument of mending the truce a permanent peace she precipitated the very calamity she was praying might be avoided. The children of the Doanes and the Hackets were in the same classes, but they mingled no more than oil and water. Down to the five-year-old child they had heard the story of the feud, and such was a self constituted champion.

One of the Hackett boys finally represented a word from one of the Doanes, drew a pocketknife and made an attack. The teacher's screams called in James Doane, who happened to be passing, and he disarmed the Hackett boy. Doane had been away in North Carolina, and this was his first meeting with the schoolmistress. He was the Kentucky mountaineer in size and strength and litheness and fearlessness, but he had a face in which there were good nature and gentleness. He had grown from youth to manhood during the truce. He had neither sought to make peace nor provoke hostilities. Having disarmed the boy, he stood staring at the girl, blushing and unable to say a word.

Then she gave a history of the Doane-Hackett feud as she had gathered the particulars. She named the killed and wounded and the living. She pictured the misery and the heartaches. She spoke in withering scorn of ambushes, of cowardice, of the burning of buildings and the maiming of animals. There had been warrants and summonses many times before. Partiality had been shown by justice, and there had been perjury without stint. She scored the Doanes as well as the Hackets. She scored the gray haired women on either side, and no one interrupted her. The sheriff was there, but he did not advance upon her. Justice, lawyers, sheriff, the Doanes and the Hackets were looking at that lighted candle and keg of powder.

"The man is innocent," said the girl, pointing to her lover. "At the hour named he was miles away. Besides, I was there and saw. Is he to have justice?"

No one answered. The flame of the candle was blowing in the draft of the window toward the keg. She reached out and picked it up and held it quite over the keg and said:

"Only sixteen people have been killed in this feud lasting fifty years. That is too slow work. Here are 200 of us. We are Doanes or we are Hackets. Why not all die together and end the trouble and bring peace to a neighborhood that has been in turmoil for half a century?"

Men cringed and chilled and chattered as the candle swept back and forth over the headless keg. So it lasted for two minutes, and then the girl blew out the light and stood with folded arms.

"The prisoner is discharged!" said the justice at last.

The Hackets tiptoed out, then the Doanes, and the Joan of the mountains was left all alone in the big room. She sat down and laid her head on the table and wept. And by and by an arm stole softly around her, and her tears ceased.

The dozen families at Chestnut Cove had already taken sides. The partisanship soon extended to others miles away. In a family feud you are for or against. For a man there can be no neutrality. Next came armings and mutterings and threats. All knew that these were the preface to deeds of violence. It needed an overt act and the killings would begin.

As the excitement intensified young Doane ceased his visits to the schoolmistress. She had not seen him for a week when one gray afternoon as she walked alone up the mountain side to gather the ripening chestnuts she saw him hiding behind a boulder. Even as she stood there looking and wondering he aimed, fired his rifle and quickly disappeared among the laurels. Twenty minutes later she knew that a horse ridden by one of the Hackett partisans had been killed in its tracks.

The girl could have told, but she didn't. Even when the Hackets charged her lover with the crime and had him arrested and confined in jail for examination she spoke no word except to him. From that hour she was thinking and planning. Her face was still gentle, but her scholars noticed that it had taken on a new look of determination, almost of heroism.

Of a certain Wednesday down in the town at the foot of the mountain James Doane was to be brought before justice of the peace for preliminary examination. Each and every one of the Doanes was there. Each and every one of the Hackets was there. Each partisan for five miles around was there. When the justice saw the size of the crowd that had gathered he adjourned the case from his office to the big room in what the townspeople called their city hall. It held 200 people. Two hundred were there to fill it. The sheriff at the door had asked each and every man who passed to leave his weapons behind. Not a man had obeyed. Who could say what would happen before the examination was concluded?

To humiliate a Doane the Hackets had insisted that the prisoner be brought in handcuffed. Women had asked to be admitted, but they were kept out—all but one. There was no school that day up in Chestnut Cove. The schoolmistress had been subpoenaed as a witness, but no one knew what her testimony would be. She had come down in the buckboard of a constable. She had talked with the official long and earnestly on the way. Before going to court he had performed an errand for her. This purchase he had carried into court, with the girl at his heels, and had placed it on a table. When the girl took her place every one felt that something remarkably uncanny was at hand. The Hackets had demanded a warrant and had a witness. He perjured himself when he said that he saw James Doane do the shooting and run away. The justice was a Hackett sympathizer, and he called their city hall. It held 200 people. Two hundred were there to fill it. The sheriff at the door had asked each and every man who passed to leave his weapons behind. Not a man had obeyed. Who could say what would happen before the examination was concluded?

A Wonderful Record.

As made up by improved and exact processes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting dyspepsia, hysteria, lapsus, anterograde and retroversion, overactive painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. It cures the backache, periodical headaches, the dragging-down distress in the pelvic region, the pain and tenderness over lower abdominal region, dries up the pelvic catarrhal drain, so disagreeable and weakening, and overcomes every form of weakness incident to the organs distinctly female.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which are not afraid to print their formula on the bottle wrapper, thus taking their patrons into their full confidence. It is the only medicine for women, every ingredient of which has the strongest possible endorsement of the most eminent medical practitioners and writers of our day, recommending it for the use for which "Favorite Prescription" is used.

It is the only put-up medicine for women sold through druggists, which does not contain a large percentage of alcohol, so harmful in the long run, especially to delicate women. It has more genuine cures to its credit than all other medicines for women combined, having saved thousands of sufferers from the operations of the surgeon's knife. It has restored delicate girls to strong and vigorous health, and vitality, making motherhood possible, where there was barrenness before, thereby brightening and making happy many thousands of homes by the advent of little ones to strengthen the marital bonds and add sunshine where gloom and despondency had reigned before.

Buster Brown.

"Buster Brown" which comes to the Paris Grand Friday night, is said to be even funnier than Outcault's famous cartoons. Cartoon plays, as a rule, are unholly horrors, but this dramatization of Outcault's creation is one of those exceptions which prove the rule. To say that Buster and his dog, Tige, are as funny as they are in the pictures isn't stretching the truth a little bit. It is not the dramatization i se which scores particularly, but the characterization of Buster and his dog. Young Master Rosen is an elfin wonder. They say that he is nearly 28 years old, but it seems unbelievable, for, no larger than a fairly well-developed child of three, he acts with a child's simplicity and yet with a technical knowledge which stamps him from the outset as the most attractive scenes is the one in which Buster jabbers French like a native. Master Rosen's accent is a delight. Jack Bell makes Tige a four-legged masterpiece instead of sending all facial expression to the demimonde howwows. Tige, with a single roll of his right eyeball, declares, "The world is mine," quite as emphatically as Monte Cristo ever did. Most actors have sufficient difficulty in making their own physical features seem almost human on the stage, but when it comes to hiding one's face behind a canine mask and still making it speak louder than words, there's an artist in the offing somewhere. In this case Mr. Bell is the man behind the dog. To thousands and thousands of youngsters Buster and his canine pal are quite as real and far more important than any of the heroes of Mother Goose or their Sunday school lessons, and to have them represented on the stage in any but the most realistic form would have been as futile as it would have proved fatal. But, boy and dog, they have met the public, and the public is theirs for a long time to come. The Boston "Brown" company boasts of one of the best drilled choruses that the town has seen in seasons. To see these lassies in kilts going through a highland drill is a delight. Buster's papa and mamma are just about as important in the play as they are in the pictures, that's to say; they are mere lay members of the Spunking Trust.

A Double Share.

Mother—Tommy, what's your little brother crying about? Tommy—"Cause I'm eatin' my cake n' won't give him any." Mother—Is his own cake finished? Tommy—Yes'm; an' he cried while I was eatin' that, too.

From this complication arise a series of situations of strong emotion, and admirably as they are written, they gain in power of conviction from their adroit handling by the exceptionally fine cast which Mr. Harris has selected for the presentation of this drama. The announcement of the play cannot fail to elicit the keen interest of all classes of theatre-goers.

Pocket Handkerchiefs.

An exchange humorously treats of pocket handkerchiefs as follows: "About all the ordinary handkerchief of a woman is fit for is to carry it in her hand and wipe her nose on if she has no cold, while a man's handkerchief is indispensable to his welfare. He uses it whether he has a cold or not; ties it around his neck to keep his collar clean if he is from the country; uses it in place of a towel or a napkin; wipes off his desk and typewriter with it; polishes his shoes, uses it as a blindfold at lodge or at party in the game of 'Jacob and Ruth,' and for a hundred other purposes. What would a man do if his handkerchief were a four-inch border of lace around a piece of linen two inches square?"

Merchant Tailoring, Spring 1907

Our Spring Suitings are now on display and we are booking quite a good many orders. Its wisdom in making an early selection in this department as the advantages in so doing are of more import than can lightly be described. We can make the best clothes but it requires time in which to accomplish this fact. We urge an early selection as being of mutual advantage.

Secured Big Contract.

Mr. Joseph Newhall, the machinist, secured the contract yesterday to install a steam heating plant at the Paris Milling Company in East Paris. When it comes to machinery, gas fitting, hot water and steam heating, Mr. Newhall is the one to see, for he is an expert in this line of business.

Indecent Post Cards.

There has been considerable comment in past few days in regard to the indecent, vulgar and disgraceful post cards that has been on exhibition in one of the show windows at The Fair, on Main Street, not fit for grown people to look at little less children that have been stopping at the window every day. Chief of Police Hill notified Mayor James O'Brien about them yesterday, and after the Mayor took a look at them, he promptly ordered the Chief of Police to have them removed from the window. The space occupied by them is now vacant. It is strange the postal authorities allow such things to pass through the mails and stranger still that a respectable merchant would put such things in his show window and sell them even to children. A man was fined and given a work house sentence in Lexington the other day for selling such cards to two little girls.

Odd Fellows For Fifty Consecutive Years.

Bourbon Lodge, I. O. O. F., No. 23, was organized in this city on November 25, 1845, with W. W. Foherill, Edward Myall, Lammel John V. Lovely and James T. Davis, all of whom are now dead, as charter members, and from that good day to the present time there has never been a more impressive occasion in their lodge room than the one on last evening. The occasion was the presentation of two beautiful jewels to two members, Mr. Geo. W. Davis and Mr. J. T. Hinton, who had been members of Bourbon Lodge in good standing for fifty consecutive years. The jewels were presented to these gentlemen in an eloquent and touching speech by Grand Master W. C. G. Hobbs, of Lexington. It was a surprise to these two veteran brothers in Odd Fellowship, and it was indeed a time that each could truthfully say "he was too full for utterance," being choked with emotion.

The jewels were beautiful, being a gold pendant, hanging from an ornamented gold bar with the letters I. O. O. F., at the top of pendant to figures, 50, studded with fifty small diamonds. The pendant represents the globe, showing North and South America, a blue enameled banner separating the two countries, the globe being encircled with a wreath of leaves fastened at the bottom with three links, the emblem of the order.

There are only twelve men in Kentucky who have the distinction of being fifty years an Odd Fellow, and strange to say three of them are members of Bourbon Lodge, Mr. James T. Davis lately deceased being the third one besides the mentioned above.

Mr. Hinton and Mr. Davis, both undertakers in this city for many years, are too well known to our citizens for us to add anything to their well spent and useful lives. While competitors in business they have been the best of friends at all times. Mr. Hinton, in fact, learned his trade under the tutorage of Mr. Davis. No two men in our city stand higher in the estimation of the people among whom they have lived all their lives than Geo. W. Davis and John T. Hinton. It is the wish of the host of friends that they both live to celebrate their one hundredth anniversary as Odd Fellows.

Jesse Wheat, Thomas McDonald, Harry Speaks, Emmet Hopkins, John Buckley and J. V. Moore.

Judge R. W. Hutchcraft Dies Suddenly.

A telegram was received here Saturday morning from Dr. J. Ed. Ray, of Galatia, Col., announcing the death of Judge R. W. Hutchcraft, which was a shock to the immediate members of his family in this city. He died suddenly Friday night of neuralgia of the heart.

Judge Hutchcraft was born in this county seventy-five years ago, and was the son of the late James Hutchcraft. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Fleming, of Fleming county, and one young daughter, and two sons and one daughter by his first wife, who was a Miss Croxton. Mr. Perry Hutchcraft, of this city, Mr. Harry Hutchcraft, of Louisville, and Miss Annie Hutchcraft, of this city; also by three sisters and one brother, Mrs. Mary F. Hedges, Mrs. Russell Mann, Mrs. Hattie Hutchcraft Hill, all of this city, and Mr. Sam Hutchcraft, of the State of Washington.

When the civil war broke out he was living in Iowa, and raised a company in that State and entered the Federal army. Captain Hutchcraft was noted for his bravery on the battle field. Shortly after the war began he received a severe wound in the arm which incapacitated him from further duty in the field and he resigned his commission and returned to Paris, where he was in some manner connected with the Provost Marshal's office. He was a popular man and well liked by a large circle of friends in this county.

Judge Hutchcraft was here at the recent home-coming gathering and enjoyed mixing with his old boyhood friends, and little it was thought that he would soon be called to pass over the river. He was county Judge of Kion county, Col., for a number of years and was holding that office at the time of his death.

His remains will reach this city this afternoon, accompanied by Mrs. Hutchcraft and her daughter and his son-in-law, Mr. Arthur Stanard. Judge Hutchcraft was a charter member of Garth Lodge, A. O. U. W., of this city, and carried a $2,000 policy. His receipt for the last payment of dues was mailed to him on Thursday last.

Funeral services will be held at the Methodist church, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. T. Strother, assisted by Elder Carey E. Morgan. The remains will be taken charge of by the Masonic and A. O. U. W. lodges. Burial at Paris cemetery.

Bourbon Warehouse Association.

The Directors of the Bourbon Warehouse Association met Saturday afternoon at the Court House and completed their organization by the election of Thomas Henry Clay, Jr., Vice President, and John T. Collins, of North Middletown, Secretary and Treasurer. In the absence of the President, Jno. LaRue, Mr. Clay presided. It was decided that warehouses would be opened at the following points in the county: North Middletown, in charge of W. A. Thompson; Millersburg, in charge of Will Judy, and Centerville, in charge of Messrs. Claude and George Redmon. They also decided to not to build or store any tobacco in Paris on account of having to pay city taxes on same, but will build or rent warehouses in different parts of the county beyond the city limits.

Sale of "Meadowthorpe."

On Saturday afternoon "Meadowthorpe," the former home of Colonel Jas. E. Pepper, in Fayette together with the entire thoroughbred stud of 63 horses, was sold at public auction. The beautiful farm of 222.32 acres, together with the dwelling house, stables and all other improvements was bought by Dr. S. H. Hally, of Payne's Depot, Ky., $250 per acre.

The sixty-three horses brought the unusually good sum of $25,470, or an average of a little over $404 per head. No sensational purchases were made, but the figures maintained an elevated level from the first to the last. Lady Pepper, a 15-year-old Hindoo-Jacquet mare, won the feature price of the day, going to J. E. Madden for $4,000. Lady Pepper is the dam of Par Excellence, who beat Gunfire in the Alabama Stakes at Saratoga.

The following purchases were made at the sale by Bourbon breeders: La Venus, bay mare by imp. Kantaka, $200, J. E. Clay. Princess Pepper, bay mare by imp. Kantaka, $200, J. E. Clay. Queen's Messenger, bay mare by imp. Kantaka, $400, J. E. Clay. Relict, bay mare by Sir Dixon, $350, J. E. Clay. Baroness Pepper, bay mare, by imp. Kantaka, $100, E. F. Clay.

Straight Talks on Patent Medicines

The "Rexall" Remedies deserve confidence.

All these remedies are grouped under one name, they must succeed or fail together. There must be no weak links in this chain. One unworthy remedy would mean disaster to the entire plan. If you, for example, purchased the "Rexall" Cough Cure and were not cured by it, how could we expect you to place any faith thereafter in the "Rexall" Dyspepsia Cure or any other member of the "Rexall" family?

You can understand, therefore, why such anxious care was given to finding and choosing the remedies to which the name "Rexall" was given. We have admitted none to this circle until our committee of experts had been convinced by investigation and test that it was the best remedy known to medical science for the ailment it aimed to relieve.

Who should know better than the leading thousand druggists of this country what are, and what are not, efficient medicine?

Remember, the success of our enterprise depends on the merit of each individual remedy. Our reputation, which is our very business existence is at stake. Can you doubt, that in buying a "Rexall" Remedy, you are buying the best that science and experience can give you?

Here are three prominent members of the "Rexall" family:

REXALL "93" HAIR TONIC

The famous Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is composed in chief of Resorcin, Beta Naphthol and Pilocarpin.

Resorcin is one of the latest and most effective germ-killers discovered by a science, and in connection with Beta Naphthol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which not only destroys the germs which rob the hair of its nutriment, but creates a clean and healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the lodgment and development of new germs.

Pilocarpin is a well-known agent for restoring the hair to its natural color, where the loss of color has been due to a disease of the scalp. It is not a coloring matter or dye—it produces its effect by stimulating the scalp and hair follicles to health and active life.

This combination of curatives mixed with alcohol as a stimulant, perfects the most effective remedy for hair and scalp troubles known to-day.

Collector Cupid

By ESTHER HARNDIN

Copyright, 1906, by P. C. Eastman

Peggy Hall sat among her shattered household idols and wept.

The particular idol which she had elected to moisten with bitter tears was a small desk of mission wood, around which had centered her happy household interests. How she had kept her accounts, calculating with infinite pains her steadily reduced living expenses! And she had written to the little town in New England letters which fairly brimmed with the contentment she had found in her life in the bustling city which would have terrified most girls from her native village.

For she had been content—nay, more, she had been happy. She had done her best, too, to make things move smoothly, but now—

No, she would not say that she hated Kit and Lucy, but she did think they were playing a very small part. Then she dried her eyes, pulled out her bank book and a sheet of blank paper and began to figure. At the end of five minutes down went her head again, and this time a sheet of paper sprinkled all over with relentless figures received the flood of tears.

Perhaps at this time Kit and Lucy, who worked in the suit department of Keith & Blank's store, felt a bit unhappy too. It was a rainy, depressing day, and customers were few. The floorwalker went downstairs to consult with the head of the advertising department, so Kit and Lucy stood shoulder to shoulder in the big square window overlooking the rain swept street.

"I never dreamed she'd take it so hard," reflected Kit, with slight asperity in her voice.

"Why, she just acted as if we were cheating or doing something dishonest," asserted Lucy in aggrieved accents. "I'm sure we haven't hurt the furniture, and the company has had more than rent on it. They'll polish it up and sell it for new."

"I don't think it was the furniture exactly," said Kit. "Peggy is just crazy about keeping house, but for my part I don't think girls in business have any right to do housework. I got so I just hated to think of going home and waiting on myself."

"Mrs. Hopkins says we can have our old room back at the same figure. She knew we'd get sick of light housekeeping. She says the head bookkeeper at Ainsley's has the second story back, and he plays the piano splendidly. Maybe we can get up some Friday night dances."

"Well, anyhow, I'm glad we're giving up the apartment. Peggy makes lovely salad dressing and fudge, but I can't make a bed decently, so housekeeping was a mistake so far as I am concerned."

Talking in this strain, each imagined that she was convincing herself, if not her companion, that they had treated Peggy in a perfectly fair way and were altogether justified in their position. Down in their hearts they did not feel quite comfortable, and neither could forget the pathetic figure they had left in their small living room.

Peggy, Kit and Lucy had met at a noonday lunch room in the days when Peggy was working in a fashion syndicate office for $10 a week. A kindred spirit of homesickness had brought them together, and when Peggy had pushed her way to the point where she could afford a tiny studio of her own and command regular orders she had fled the offices of the fashion syndicate and had asked the girls to start up a small establishment with her. They had selected an apartment with a northern exposure for Peggy's work, furnished it on the installment plan, and for a time all went well.

Peggy, being most domestic in her instincts, picked up the burden of household management, and in time the other two girls not only depended upon her for managing the little establishment, but failed to do their share of the work. In her first enthusiasm Peggy bore this weekly, but very soon she found that the housework interfered with her work at the easel. She ran behind on her orders, and then, diplomatically and kindly, she took up the question with her housemates. Kit and Lucy promptly announced that they were disappointed in the housekeeping scheme, and they would be only too glad to return to boarding, where working girls belonged. If she wanted to pay the rest on the furniture and keep the flat open for herself, they would not begrudge what they had spent.

And that was just what Peggy found she could not do—meet the rent and furniture payments. She sat up, wiped her eyes and figured some more. The girls were leaving Saturday, the rent was paid for two weeks longer, and the collection day for the furniture company was ten days distant. She would enjoy it while she might. Perhaps within the fortnight— She shook her head. It was no use to depend upon girl chums.

She felt somehow that the furniture company would get the best of the bargain, and yet she would be breaking her word for the first time in her brief business history, and this hurt.

"I don't know what your job is," he said easily as the chief collector motioned him to a chair and looked him over shrewdly. "But I'm sober, industrious and strong, and I want work—any kind to get a start."

"You look as if you might do," replied the collector dryly. "But looks don't count much in this business. It's your ability to get the money or the goods. We sell furniture on the installment plan. A lot of people forget the last few installments. That's where our profits come in. You get the last payments or the furniture. We don't care which. Want to try it?"

"Yea," replied Brightwell promptly. "When do you want me to begin?"

"Right now." And after a brief discussion of terms, hours, etc., Brightwell salled forth, armed with the book of his predecessor.

He ran down the list. "Moore, Greenwich, Hall," all within a block strictly vegetable, perfectly harmless, cure to accomplish DESIRED RESULTS. Greatest known female remedy. Price, $1.50 per bottle.

CAUTION: Beware of counterfeits and imitations. The genuine is put up only in paste-board Carton with foil-wrapped on side of the bottle. Price, $1.50 per bottle.

of each other. Moore and Greenwich were marked as "slow." The name of Hall had this memo, written after it: "Hear that two of the family have skipped out. Expect trouble."

It was characteristic of Brightwell that he started at the hard end of the game and rang the bell marked "Hall."

He climbed the narrow stairs and flung back his shoulders as he rang the private bell on the second floor.

"Is Mrs. Hall in? Peggy—why, Peggy Hall!" he exclaimed. Then he stepped quickly inside and closed the door behind him.

"I—I thought it was the furniture Brightwell, what are you doing here? However is your mother getting along without you?"

She had led the way into the tiny living room and now stood regarding him with a severe look not at all in keeping with the song her heart was singing.

"I decided that Alf was big enough to look after mother and that if I ever won you I'd have to follow you to New York and make good, as you have done, or you'd grow away from me."

Peggy's gaze fell. Henry had never told her he loved her or wanted to win her, but of course she had thought—

He drew her very close. Perhaps he had recognized this as the psychological moment.

"I struck a job the first place I went, Peggy, dear. I think I can make my way here. Will you help me?"

Fifteen minutes later he remembered the firm of Jones & Grab.

"I guess I'd better be moving on. I was looking for a family by the name of Hall that owes my firm some money."

Peggy turned scarlet.

"I'm the Hall, and I can't pay you. The girls," her eyes snapped—"the girls went back on me."

Henry Brightwell sat down very suddenly on the sofa on which $7.50 was yet due.

"Well, what do you think of that?"

Then his face cleared. Yankeeshrewdness asserted itself. He began to figure, and Peggy helped him.

That afternoon he walked into the office of the collection department and laid down his book and a roll of bills. "Moore and Greenwich paid up to date. Miss Hall is up against it. Her two partners skipped and left her with all the furniture on her hands. She wants to keep it if she can. There's $7.50 still due. Will you let me compromise with her for $7.50 cash?"

"Sure," said the collector.

"I kind of thought you would, so I took the $7.50 while she was in the frame of mind. You never can tell how women will jump, you know."

"You're all right, young man. You can have a berth here as long as you keep up this pace."

The head bookkeeper from Ainsley's did not find Mrs. Hopkins' select boarding house to his liking, and the Friday evening dances never materialized, but sometimes when Kit and Lucy want a real pleasant evening they go to the Brightwell apartment, where there are always guests worth meeting. Then they go back to the third story front, with its cheap brass beds and moth-eaten hangings, and one says to the other:

"Well, of course we get no credit for it, but we helped to pay for Peggy's pretty things."

Disillusioned.

"She had played in amateur theatricals, you know, and threatened to go on the stage if her parents wouldn't let her marry the duke."

"And what did her parents do?"

"They let her go on the stage, gave the duke a check for a front seat and were not at all surprised when he sailed back to France the next morning." —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Good News to Women.

Father William's Indian Tea, Nature's Remedy, is becoming the most popular Female Remedy in use.

Pale, Weak, Nervous, Delicate Women suffering from those weaknesses and diseases, peculiar to their sex, will find in Father William's Indian Tea a wonderful Tonic and Regulator. It quiets the Nerves, puts on flesh, gives strength and elasticity to the skin, brightens the eyes, clears the complexion and makes you well and strong again. Tea or Tablets, 20 cents. For sale by W. T. Brooks.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribe local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

War Threats.

(From the San Francisco Daily News.)

War is the word used by President Roosevelt in his efforts to induce the San Francisco Board of Education to recede from its position in regard to the Japanese.

The President thrusts the responsibility of averting war with Japan upon the people of San Francisco.

"We must act immediately in removing all causes of friction between the United States and Japan," the President says. "The San Francisco question must be disposed of, if possible, without waiting for the decision of the courts. We are dealing with a proud and brave nation."

"Japan has been wounded in her tender spot—her national pride," Secretary Root has declared. "The Japanese regard themselves as the equals of any other people on earth," he says.

They undoubtedly do. But San Francisco's of the Japanese and the Jap's opinion of himself are radically different.

San Francisco and California know the Japanese as no other city or state in the United States knows him.

"Japan is a proud and brave nation," declared the President and the Secretary of State.

Yes, gentlemen; and California's great wrecked city is a proud, brave and patriotic municipality. Must San Francisco's children be sacrificed to a pagan nation's pride?

Never!

San Francisco is obedient to the laws that allow the yellow hordes to pour through the Golden Gate, but San Francisco knows no law that compels her to expose her future citizens to moral degradation. San Francisco and California do not want war, Mr. President; they will fight for their children to the last ditch.

Bourbon News does best printing.

Wanted.

Gentleman or lady to travel for mercantile house large capital. Territory at home or abroad to suit. If desirable the home may be used as headquarters. Weekly salary of $1,000 per year and expenses. Address, Jos A. Alexander, Paris, Ky.

Escaped in Night Clothes.

The residence of Mrs. Lillie Burton, at Mt. Sterling, was gutted by fire Friday morning and all household goods and wearing apparel were lost. A defective flue is blamed. Mrs. Burton and her son, John, were sleeping when the flames were discovered and narrowly escaped, through fire and smoke, in their night clothes and stockings, with the thermometer hovering about zero. The loss is put at $4,000; insurance $2,600. Most of her effects were packed in boxes preparatory to moving to Millersburg, this county.

Red Snow.

No satisfactory explanation of the recent fall of red snow in the Canadian Rockies has been advanced. This is not the first time such an occurrence has been observed in the Rockies, but the manifestation is apparently early. No satisfactory explanation has been advanced as to its cause.

The snow covering the mountains with the pronounced red hue over their mantel of white has an extraordinary weird effect. The Indians and half-breeds and others susceptible to superstitious forebodings are regarding the visitation as a portent of dire calamity, and are applying themselves with unusual fervor to devotions. Among the explanations put forward to account for the visitation is the theory that it is caused by red volcanic dust from the mountains, having been caught up by the high winds and held in suspense until brought down by the snow. Another theory is that it is the dust of plants, while a third is to the effect that some peculiar manifestation in the chemistry of nature has caused the discoloration of the snow.

Fine Old Goose.

The 71-year-old goose, owned by James Strong, of Allen county, Kas., could, in truth, be termed a "rare" bird. This septuagenarian goose has gone through many a hardship without quack or complaint, for it braved the discomforts of the pioneer days in Allen county. The goose struts about the barnyard with the pride of a peacock, and is treated with the utmost solicitude by its owner, who does everything in his power to make the fowl last days comfortable.

McBrayer Distillery Sold.

The McBrayer Distilling Company, in Montgomery county which is one of the largest in the State has been sold to Rosenfield & Brother, of Chicago, through W. W. Johnson, of Cincinnati. The price paid is said to have been about $85,000.

J. D. McClintock was the first agent to pay his insurance on the school building; thousand cash.
